What is Supermajority Education Fund?

We're at a moment in this country when women are activating — many for the first time ever — and more than resist, they want to build the kind of world they want to live in.

- 1 in 5 Americans have marched or protested since 2016 and the biggest issue driving these actions is support for women's rights.
- In 2018, women made up 53 percent of the electorate, propelling a record number of women, and women of color, into office.
- In 2018, women donated over $100 million more to candidates and campaigns than they did in 2016.
- Today, more than 40% of women are their family's breadwinner (Center for American Progress).
- Women are the majority of organizers, activists, and voters across the U.S.

After traveling around the country, listening to women from a wide range of experiences talk about a desire to build something greater than the sum of our parts, we launched Supermajority Education Fund. Supermajority Education Fund is building a home for women's civic engagement by educating and training a multiracial, intergenerational community that will work together to achieve gender equity.
